

promises to be as popular as it has been during the winter.

"Governor Hayes," the monster ox which has been for some time on exhibition at Washington, was slaughtered on Saturday, and there was a great demand for its flesh for dinners on inauguration day; Willard's Hotel alone taking thousands of pounds.

Among the dresses worn at a recent Presidential ball at Paris was one made of Point de Venice, more remarkable than any specimens of Venetian lace now extant. The design was made by the brother of Titian for one of the most illustrious princesses of his day, and it is now worth a hundred times its weight in gold.
